She decided to take a step further and sent a few applications to different addresses, and finally, she managed to sell her content to a company in Berlin. (…)

She spent those days of "leisure" by making, as she says, "little websites" and working as a labeler with a small company. In the first year they made 40 websites, and over the next four years, the company was in business—until June 2017—almost 100.

According to her, she entered the world of entrepreneurship spontaneously. She also created the robot-mascot of the Battle for Knowledge campaign ran by the B92 Fund and designed with her colleague placed among the ten submission awarded by NASA at an international contest. She was featured on the front page of CNN Style.

A Meeting Held with the Representatives of the Kolubara district

Better conditions for the Center for Help at Home marks first anniversary in Belgrade. Mr. Knežević, the chairman of the center, stressed that they have been working to improve the living conditions of migrants and refugees and to develop their socio-economic integration. The center was organized in 2016 with the financial support of the Kolubara district and the Ministry of Labor, Labor Relations and Employment. It provides assistance to over 100 people per month, mainly from Afghanistan, Syria, and Iraq.

New funding call for individuals and organizations working on social inclusion and poverty reduction. The Social Inclusion and Poverty Reduction Unit, together with the Swiss Agency for Development and Cooperation (SDC), invites individuals and organizations working on social inclusion and poverty reduction to submit their applications for the new funding call.
